

As intercollegiate athletics become increasingly commercialized, a number of commentators have explored the impact such commercialization should have, if any, on the § 503(c)(3) non-profit tax exemption treatment for such programs. This Note examines the case for continued tax exemption treatment in light of increasing commercialization and explores alternative means of addressing increasing commercialization.